Attendance of museums and galleries

Such cultural places like galleries and museums hold the works of the greatest minds known to humankind and being able to behold those pieces of art that were passed on to us by previous generations is a great privilege.

As we can see from the I have presented to you from the year 2013 to 2015 visits have accelerated at an astounding rate except the two museums that had introduced admission charges in 2014. For instance, British Museum and National Gallery have had 2.5 and 1.6 million increase in visits respectively during that period.

In order to increase people's attendance I recommend getting rid of any fees or admission charges if possible. That would definitely appeal to people more. Another recommendation that's substantial is implementing technology. Make it interesting instead of guides you could put up touch-screens that would have all the information about the certain work of art. And boards where kids could draw on and maybe try to copy one of the paintings. That would make museums not only a place for adults but also for small kids that can have a blast while also educating themselves.

In conclusion, I'd like to summarize my suggestions. As years go by, technology becomes almost an inseparable part of our lives so museums and galleries should implement it too.
