Hello, today I would like to draw your attention on the matter of museum and gallery attendance. In this brief report we'll take a look at how popular some museums are and what can potentially be a cause of said popularity. So, without further ado

Here you can see five museums and galleries of England and how many people visited these places. The key fragments of this chart are British Museum with National Gallery and Natural History Museum with Science Museum. For the sake of this report, I'll refer to the British Museum as B.M, to the National Gallery as N.G, to Natural History museum as N.H.M and to the Science Museum as S.M respectively. As you can see B.M and N.G are the most popular as of right now, while N.H.M and S.M have low rate of visits.

That was not always the case. In 2013 B.M and N.G were less popular than N.H.M and S.M, but the situation changed when admission charges were introduced in 2014 at N.H.M and S.M, making B.M and N.G much more appealing.

And that's why N.H.M and S.M are less popular than ~~the~~ even the Tate Gallery. I would probably revert the changes made in 2014. Of course, the Tate Gallery'll have to pick up the pace, do a little advertisement.

Well, I think that's all. To summarize the main events: A substantial rise in popularity of B.M and N.G and introduction of admission charges in 2014 in N.H.M and S.M. That is all, thank you for your time.
